

23Q01: Idaho State Police pre-employment (withholding information)

Pre-test Instructions

The Idaho State Police wants to ensure that none of its employees have ties to criminal groups and we want to ensure that you were truthful when providing details in the pre-interview process. This test will determine if you have been truthful during the hiring process.

First, we want to ensure that none of our employees have personal involvement with gangs or organized crime. This includes being a past or current member of a gang or organized crime group, providing assistance to, or receiving a personal benefit from these groups. Gangs and organized crime groups have tried to infiltrate law enforcement by sending operatives to apply to work for police agencies. If hired, the operative uses his position to commit crimes, or to serve as an informant. Associating with a gang or organized crime group is a serious crime. It may be punishable by up to 20 years in prison.

Examples of criminal groups could include: Mexican gangs such as the Sureños 13, SVC, or Northsiders. It could include skinheads or Arian gangs and motorcycle gangs such as the Hell's Angels. We are committed to the security and protection of the state of Idaho. We will aggressively pursue and prosecute anyone working on behalf of a gang or organized crime group.

Second, we want to make sure you were truthful in the pre-interview process when asked about your involvement in illegal activities that would disqualify you from employment with the Idaho State Police.

The pre-interview screening process included three steps: 1) filling out a job application, 2) completing a personal history questionnaire, and 3) having a pre-test interview with an examiner. We assume that when you completed these three steps, you were honest in your responses on the application, personal history and when speaking to the examiner.

One purpose of this test is to ask if you withheld information or lied about any details in the hiring process. Most people lie to avoid additional consequences.

In summary, this test will ask if you have had any involvement with gangs or organized crime. And, you will be asked if you were truthful when providing details about yourself during the process, or did you fail to mention some facts.

Think about the pre-interview process. Other than the things you mentioned on your job application and personal history, have you chosen to hide anything from us? Were you truthful about places you've lived, or worked, or your education, or did you leave out some facts? Were you truthful when completing the personal history questionnaire, or did you decide to lie? Did you fail to include crimes you've committed, but haven't been caught? Were you honest when speaking to the examiner when interviewed? If not, what crimes or issues did you forget to mention?

If you have been involved with a gang or organized crime, or if you were not truthful when providing details in the pre-interview process, please tell the test administrator now.

Before you begin the lie detection test, you will be shown a set of practice questions. These give you a chance to get used to reading and answering True/False on the computer.

The practice questions ask about crimes that we are sure you did not commit. There also will be questions unrelated to any crimes. In all cases, it is important that you answer truthfully.

In addition to responding accurately to test questions, you must respond quickly. If you take too long to answer, even though your answer is correct, the computer will report that you were lying on the test. To pass the test, you must be accurate and fast.

During the practice test, there will be a short time limit for each question to encourage you to read and respond quickly. If you do not respond quickly enough, you will see a "Time Limit Expired" message, and you will hear a tone. You will not be allowed to answer after the tone. Expired time limits will be counted as errors.

While you take the practice test, keep your chin in the chinrest. Move your eyes to read. Keep your head still. Do not adjust any equipment. Do not look at your fingers. Do not talk or make any unnecessary movements.

Read each question and press the green button or the key labeled T if it's True. Press the red button or the key labeled F if it's False. After you press either the button or the key, the answer you chose will be highlighted briefly on the screen. The next statement will appear automatically.
