Subject: An Option

Marsha,

First and foremost, thank you and Erin for the incredible planning and counsel (and patience with me) in preparation for Thursday.

Here is an option that I'd like to run by you. It is my preference, but we should discuss.

Thanks so much.

NOTABLE CLIPS:

The Monitor: Source: Mexico not taking certain migrant families; RGV feeling impact with over 10,000 in custody (Valerie Gonzalez)

Mexico has stopped accepting families who are not from the country, according to a Mexican federal source, prompting an increase in migrants held in detention across the Rio Grande Valley and casting uncertainty over the effectiveness of a U.S. public health code known as Title 42 that immediately expels migrant families during the pandemic. According to the source, Mexican officials were made aware of the changes since Wednesday, but said no official communication had been released by Mexico's office of Foreign Relations and the National Institute of Immigration, also known as SRE and INM.

NBC News: ICE to begin processing migrant families to relieve overcrowded border patrol stations (Julia Ainsley)

A surging number of immigrant families crossing the border in recent weeks has led to overcrowding in border patrol stations, and many of those families will now be transferred to Immigration and Customs Enforcement custody, according to two senior Department of Homeland Security officials. From there, the families will either be released with ankle monitors and a court date to make their case for asylum or put on flights to be quickly deported, the officials said.

Fox News: Border Patrol union official warns COVID-positive migrants being released into US 'day in, day out' (Adam Shaw)

A top Border Patrol union official is warning that agents are having to release COVID-positive migrants into the U.S. "day in, day out" -- amid the ongoing crisis at the border, which also has Border Patrol agents worried about their own health. "Not everyone we encounter we test, only those that exhibit some type of symptoms and not everybody has symptoms that has it," Chris Cabrera, a vice president of the National Border Patrol Council, said Saturday on "Fox News Live."

The Guardian: 'It's quite feasible to start a war': just how dangerous are ransomware hackers? (Sirin Kale)

They have the sort of names that only teenage boys or aspiring Bond villains would dream up (REvil, Grief, Wizard Spider, Ragnar), they base themselves in countries that do not cooperate with international law enforcement and they don't care whether they attack a hospital or a multinational corporation. Ransomware gangs are suddenly everywhere, seemingly unstoppable – and very successful.
